Farmstay Program

Our Farmstay program can provide you with a friendly and comfortable environment where you can learn more about Canadian culture and the English language. You will have the opportunity to make new friendships by living and working on a Canadian farm in British Columbia. The program includes accommodation and all meals.

This program requires minimum one month of lessons at inlingua Vancouver with our exclusive conversational method, in addition to the actual Farmstay program. This program takes place in British Columbia, from the majestic Rocky Mountains to Vancouver Island.

For the Farmstay program, inlingua Vancouver is partnered with HSH-StudyNet.

Participants must be willing to participate in farm chores for a minimum of 5 hours per day, 5 days per week. Farm hosts provide a room and board and a welcoming environment to participants. Flexibility is required from participants as each farm offers different possibilities and the time of the year also determines the type of work.

This is a seasonal program with placements corresponding to the regular Canadian farm cycle, between April 15th and October 15th, only.

- Students will practice their English in a real environment, without teachers or students, and by working and helping Canadian farmers, students will speak more and more. That is the objective of the work experience.
- It is always unpaid. No salary is offered and students should not ask for it or expect it.
- Farm houses are not luxury or elegant places. Students will have a private room in most farms and share the other areas of the house with the family members.
- Before the work experience, students will take an English course at inlingua Vancouver. The duration of the English course can be a minimum of 4 weeks and there is no maximum duration. Then the farmstay duration will be for minimum 6 weeks and maximum 20 weeks, and it should finish October 15.
- Because temperatures are very cold in the winter and in the beginning of the spring season, the farmstay program starts in April 15, the earliest, and should finish by October 15, the latest. The best time for the farmstay program is the summer season, from July to September.
- This program is for students who have a background in the agricultural industry or want to experience the countryside in Canada.
- Students need to have an open mind and a desire to live the experience day by day, understanding that a farm is a farm and their lifestyle will have some limitations and comfort should not be expected.
- Students will work and live with the family and their duties will be related to what they do and need in the farm.
- Students are expected to work between 5 and 8 hours per day and in most farms there is no work in the weekends.
- The kind of farm determines the amount of hours of work, and if during the placement process the applicant indicates to our coordinator that he/she only wants to work a certain amount of time per day, or a limited number of days, then that will be considered but not guaranteed.
- Farmstay is a lot of hard work at times. Students work like any other member of the farm. Farms are family operations. So the father, mother and usually their adult kids work there and do most of the work. They all divide tasks.
- If the student has experience with the machinery that the farm utilizes, then the student is offered more and more responsibilities.
- We always avoid placing students in a farm where he/she could be in danger, although the nature of the work involves some risk, and the student will sign a waiver before starting the experience.
- Some farms are tourist places that especially during the summer offer accommodation and activities to tourists. In these farms, the student works and helps with all kind of tasks. Students need to be flexible and service oriented.
- Many farms also have cattle and horses and other animals. Looking after the farm animals is an important task that students will have.

- Because of the distances in British Columbia and Canada in general, students should not expect to be close to Vancouver. Their travelling time will be anything from 1 to 12 hours, so they will live in the farm during all their Farmstay.
- Normally, life in the weekends will be relaxed, close to a small town, enjoying the local traditions.
- Accepted participants understand that a standard of work performance while on the farm will be expected of them. Failure to meet the expectations of the Farm hosts may result in a transfer from the original placement.
- Failure to meet expectations on two consecutive placements will result in program expulsion, at which time refund will apply as per HSH-StudyNet refund policy.

Requirements for the Farmstay Program

1. Registration at inlingua for at least 6 weeks, in any program of study plus 6 weeks of Farmstay
